Make your next meeting/remote work day/find-a-quiet-spot-and-read day more interesting.

With an abundance of comfortable seating, free wifi, and cozy nooks, Baltimore Center Stage’s first floor has been transformed into Mount Vernon’s new public gathering space. Come together with friends and colleagues or carve out that quiet time around the hum and artistic energy of your professional theater. Who knows who you might bump into!

To Bean is open Monday - Friday from 8am - 3pm and serves a variety of hot and cold coffees and teas, as well as snacks.

Support for creating the infrastructure and furnishing of To Bean or Not to Bean™ was provided by a generous gift from long-time Baltimore Center Stage donors and philanthropists George and Betsy Sherman.

ABOUT US

Founded in 1963 and designated the State Theater of Maryland in 1978, Baltimore Center Stage provides the highest quality theater and programming for all members of our communities, including youth and families, under the leadership of Artistic Director Stephanie Ybarra and Executive Director Michael Ross. Baltimore Center Stage ignites conversations and imaginations by producing an eclectic season of professional productions across two mainstages and an intimate 99-seat theater, through engaging community programs, and with inspiring education programs. Everything we do at Center Stage is led by our core values—chief among them being Access For All. Our mission is heavily rooted in providing active and open accessibility for everyone, regardless of any and all barriers, to our Mainstage performances, education initiatives, and community programming.

Dear Baltimore Center Stage Members and Guests,

My father died in October, right around the time we were casting Richard & Jane & Dick & Sally. And I’ve been putting off writing this program note ever since, not knowing quite what to say.

Before October, I might have written about my fascination with the way playwright Noah Diaz moves seamlessly between adhering to and departing from Aristotelian structures.

Before October, I might have shared my affinity with Sally and the pressure she is under to conform and assimilate.

Before October, I might have gushed about Noah himself, predicting his ascent through the American Theater.

Before October...

But today, the only thing I know I want to say is that this play is a gift to me—full of the strength, fragility, joy, and pain of those people we call “family.” And I’m humbled to share this gift.

To anyone who has ever had a mother, a father, a sister, a brother, or a dog: this story is for you.

I am a third-year graduate student in the playwriting program at the Yale School of Drama. This is only interesting insomuch that we don’t learn how to write plays there. When I share this with people, no one ever seems to find it as funny as I do. They peer at me, stricken, and ask, Then—what do you do?

What do we do?
We go to class. We go to rehearsal. We watch plays. We are moved by them, or we aren’t. We fill our days. We keep going. We write when we can. Some of us read plays, some of us don’t. We interrogate our histories. We interrogate ourselves. We grow up, I think. That’s important to this, you understand. We only commit ourselves to three years of school, but the kind of growing up that happens in that time is staggering. We grow into the people our audiences, communities, and characters need us to be. We ask, and are asked to answer: Why are we writing? How are we writing? To whom are we writing?

I think this is everything.
Our ability to write for the theatric form is an unspoken given upon our acceptance to the school, but an understanding of how to begin answering those questions is not. Why? How? To Whom?
I don’t know yet. Maybe one day.
I have a theory that dramatic structure doesn’t exist. This is mostly founded by the fact that I’ve never met someone who can concisely explain it to me the same way twice. In the void of any real comprehension, I think towards a basal understanding of the word “structure”—something architectural, with support beams, with wire, with copper pipes. A house. I might think of writing a play as building a house. There are many stupid metaphors in the world to describe the act of playwriting and maybe this is one of them; or maybe building a house out of plaster and wood is just as beautiful and arduous a task as building a world onstage with words and words alone.

I once challenged myself to read all one hundred and sixty-five winners and nominees for the Pulitzer Prize for Drama. It was a silly challenge, spurred mostly by boredom and curiosity. I had time to kill during my spring semester and an endless network of university libraries at my disposal—why not read the classics and inevitable classics?

I made it to 1953 (William Inge’s Picnic) before abandoning the project, but not before having revisited works like Eugene O’Neill’s Anna Christie, Thornton Wilder’s Our Town, and Tennessee Williams’ A Streetcar Named Desire. Major works that have endured the test of time. But among them: a long string of minor works, lost to time. Major in Pulitzer recognition; minor in cultural impact.

I wonder about that. I wonder about creating and being left behind.

I think about another graduate student, years from now, hundreds of them with a chunk of months and days on top, reading a play of mine. Maybe it’s been lost to obscurity or maybe it hasn’t. Maybe it’s a classic. I mean, every play started somewhere. But how did it get where it is, in their hands, years away from where I am now?

Maybe it has something to do with recognizing legacy—waving from a distance to the ones who have done it before, but sweeping aside their pages so you can do it next.
A list of “classic” texts that have shaped my artistry, and how:

Our Town by Thornton Wilder, for oscillating between the cosmic and trivial realities of lived human life with grace. I am taught that the unremarkable corners of our world can, and must, be rendered with dignity.

King Lear by William Shakespeare, even though I’ve never actually read it, which I think is a funny anecdote to share at parties. Having skimmed it more times than I can count, the play’s themes of compassion, familial obligation, and reconciliation permeate my work time and time again.

Angels in America by Tony Kushner, for its explosive forms, for its incisive wordplay, and for its monumental risk-taking. With every visit I take to the worlds of these plays, I am reminded that writing must cost something of its author. There is a personal price to be paid for putting one’s life on paper and rarely do you see a play cost an author this much.

Six Characters in Search of An Author by Luigi Pirandello, for introducing me to absurdism, humanism, and meta-theatricality. No other play has challenged my understanding of “play.” No other play has frustrated me more.

Three Tall Women by Edward Albee, for this quote alone: “That’s the happiest moment. When it’s all done. When we stop. When we can stop.” Never has a playwright so painfully captured the futility, the optimism, and the reality of reaching the end of life. I find myself drifting towards existential ponderings on death more frequently than I’d like, this play and quote always in the back of my mind.

Note:

The irony of a playwright of color listing five white men as influences is not lost on me.

I wonder what this says about what we consider a canon of classics.

I wonder what this says about me.

But mostly I wonder if my plays would ever sit next to any of them on a shelf.
I often lie in bed at night, picturing the Pulitzer classics I have read as houses.

_Death of a Salesman_ is a rowhouse.

_South Pacific_ is a bungalow.

_Hamlet_ is a brownstone with many rooms.

I slip into sleep, thinking about the many play-homes that dot the expansive face of this great country. I think about the many new houses that pop up next door, fully-formed, architecturally-sound, and I wonder if there’s room on the block for both.

Noah Diaz, 1/9/20
Richard & Jane & Dick & Sally features a Deaf character whose father doesn’t want her to learn ASL. Can you help us understand some of the nuances in the Deaf community around conversations about assimilation? How might hearing audiences and Deaf audiences receive this part of the play differently?

JOEY: For a long time, society has viewed Deafness as something that needs to be fixed, as if we were broken. What people don’t realize is that it’s not that we just can’t hear... we don’t hear. We never know what we’re missing if we’ve never been born hearing but because of the inability to speak or hear properly, it’s no secret that we’re treated differently or ignored. Because of this “otherness” we experience from hearing people, Deaf people are trained to speak and hear in order to assimilate into society because of their refusal to accommodate us. I believe a large number of our audiences can empathize with Sally and that “otherness” feeling, but there’s probably more empathy coming from our Deaf audiences because her story rings true for many of us.

What can you tell us about the differences (social, physical, or otherwise) between using ASL and using voice to communicate?

TRESHELLE: Using voice to communicate is huge for some D/HH (Deaf and Hard-of-Hearing) people. They may have experienced training such as speech therapy or have been taught by their family or gone to Oral school. There are a range of us that may be experts at reading lips and some of us who are worse at it (like myself). The time it takes to learn speech or use ASL depends on a person’s upbringing and their IEP (individualized education program). To make an IEP, teachers and parents come together to discuss a child’s individualized educational path—their education goals, options for speech therapy, and their potential college or trade school careers.

JOEY: A majority of the Deaf community use two different ways to communicate: sign language and spoken language. Sign language is used through handshapes and motions, facial expressions, and body placements while spoken language is used through voice, speech, and diction. For a lot of people born without hearing or the use of their voice, communicating through spoken language is a challenging ordeal. Sign language, on the other hand, is a more natural choice for Deaf people; it is worth mentioning that American Sign Language is its own language as it has its own grammar rules, structure, and syntax just like any other language, not a form of mimicry.

What’s something you wish hearing people understood about Deaf culture?

JOEY: Lip-reading is not a skill. It’s a survival mechanism. Deaf people lip-read... because you do not know sign language. In a general conversation, only 30% of what you say is understood through lip-reading. A Deaf person will catch key words then fill in the blanks, so it’s not that we’re good at lip-reading, we’re good at guessing.

TRESHELLE: Please don’t come into the room like you think the deaf person may hear you walk in. We don’t; please warn us ahead or make a great vibration noise so that way we become aware of our surroundings. Deaf culture is such a sacred culture of how we are beings in our daily lives. When a deaf person bumps into a stranger on the street, a hearing person may talk to the deaf person and ask for directions on their whereabouts. The Deaf person tells the hearing person that they are deaf and the hearing person says, “oh.” and still keeps talking. There are other ways of communicating with a Deaf person: use a phone to type, or Google Voice to translate, or write down on paper. Most often a hearing person will walk away without trying to communicate on their easy comfort level.

What can you share with our audiences about the role of the Director of Artistic Sign Language (DASL) and why it’s an important part of the process?

TRESHELLE: The role of DASL (Director of Artistic Sign Language) is the most important, not just for deaf actors but for hearing actors, director, crew, and many more. They are able to educate everyone on sensitivity level, on how to keep in mind and be mindful when it comes to someone who can do something completely different than what other people can do (i.e. hear/not hear). I love that their role can be an eye-opening and changing moment for everyone and translate into beautiful visuals depending on what the theme plays off in the play or musical. They also have a wonderful skill of capturing the role essences into accents in our hand language to express what the character is really about. If a hearing actor were to be part of dialogue, this is where the DASL would step in to help and translate in what the whole conversation will be about and how it is portrayed when it comes to audience to understand.
What Is Language?

Linguists Bernard Bloch and George L. Trager define language as “a system of arbitrary symbols by means of which a social group cooperates.” Noam Chomsky says it’s “a set (finite or infinite) of sentences, each finite in length and constructed out of a finite set of elements.” According to Aristotle, language is “the representation of the experiences of the mind.” What else is language?

An expression of identity, of emotions, of imagination, of play
Signs, sounds, symbols, characters, inflections, gestures
Birds’ songs, bees’ dances, dogs’ barks, rivers’ babbles
The crucial ability to understand and be understood

How would you define language?

Learning Languages

Language acquisition involves learning a huge amount of information and structures, including phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics, as well as vocabulary. Linguists are still debating “nature vs nurture” when considering how our infant brains are able to piece together these complex grammars from the limited data we are exposed to. Right now, the majority of scholars fall on the “nature” side: human brains must be prewired for language. We are born to communicate.

What are your earliest language memories?

Whether they are learning new languages, clinging onto old ones, or failing to interact altogether, Richard & Jane & Dick & Sally struggle to connect across barriers, ultimately asking us: what does it mean to communicate?

By Sabine Decatur, Artistic Fellow
Reading Languages

Once we’ve gotten our initial language acquisition down, written communication brings up whole new questions. After World War I, teachers argued that kids would learn best with whole words, repetition, lots of pictures, and characters they could relate to—values that led to the creation of the now iconic Dick & Jane books. This strategy saw a fair amount of criticism, not the least of which is that the Dick & Jane characters are not universally relatable. In the 60’s the publishers responded by adding a Black family: Mike, his sisters the twins Pam and Penny, and their parents. But despite these meager efforts, Dick & Jane were pushed off the market in favor of books with a more phonics-based approach and more multicultural characters.

What were your first books?

Love Languages

When pastor and “relationship expert” Gary Chapman published his book The 5 Love Languages in 1992, he had no idea his terminology would become ubiquitous across much of American culture, a staple of marriage counseling, advice columns, and Twitter memes alike. Chapman’s theory is that everyone gravitates towards one of five modes of expressing and receiving love, or “love languages”: Words of Affirmation, Gifts, Acts of Service, Quality Time, or Physical Touch. He asserts that by becoming aware of your own communication style, and that of your partner, you can forge better relationships. Of course, according the internet, there are decidedly more than five love languages; mine include reading Toni Morrison, sharing nachos, and debating astrology.

What’s your love language?

Come up with your own or take the quiz with the Love Nudge app or at http://www.5lovelanguages.com
Powerful Languages
As much as communication can bring us together, it can also be a tool for exclusion and oppression. Notions of “proper” language are often used to maintain dominant power structures. Deviating from the linguistic norm—by speaking with an accent, using dialects like African American Vernacular English (AAVE), or signing in ASL—often means being marginalized, discounted, and discriminated against. In the face of this discrimination, many folks turn to a practice called code-switching. NPR’s Gene Demby defines the term: “many of us subtly, reflexively change the way we express ourselves all the time. We’re hopscotching between different cultural and linguistic spaces and different parts of our own identities — sometimes within a single interaction.”

How do you communicate differently in different spaces?

Grief Languages
Do you wear your feelings on your sleeve or keep them inside? Do you confide in others or turn to isolation? Do you cry it out or laugh through the pain? Or do you do all of the above? Just like love languages, people have a range of modes through which they communicate grief. In her 1969 book On Death and Dying, Elisabeth Kübler-Ross proposed five stages of grieving: denial and isolation, anger, bargaining, depression, then ultimately, acceptance. These stages have become a common refrain, but grief refuses to fit inside of these boxes, making communicating feelings of sadness especially difficult.

When encountered with strong or overwhelming emotions, how do you express yourself?

Changing Languages
Today, language continues to evolve. In recent years, new words like “bae,” “stan,” and “hangry” have been added to the dictionary, while words like “ghost,” “woke,” “lit,” and “tea” have gained new meanings. Evolving technology has given us new texting lingo like “omg,” “lol,” and “yolo,” as well as a wealth of emojis, GIFs, and memes.

What’s your favorite 2020 communication style?

Frederick Kennedy is pleased to be making his debut at Baltimore Center Stage. Recent work includes Native Son (The Acting Company), The Bacchae (Classical Theater of Harlem), Caesar and Cleopatra (Gingold Theatrical Group), The Veil Widow Conspiracy (National Asian American Theater Company), Twelfth Night (Yale Repertory Theater), and Father Comes Home from the Wars, Parts 1, 2, and 3 (American Conservatory Theater). He holds a MFA in Sound Design from Yale School of Drama and a Bachelor of Music in Jazz Studies from the University of North Texas, and is on the faculty of Yale School of Drama and the City University of New York. www.fredkennedy.org
YOUNG PLAYWRIGHTS FESTIVAL

Students in grades K–12 throughout Maryland are eligible to submit plays to our annual festival. Winning playwrights are honored with a playwright mentor to help them refine and edit their scripts before the plays receive a professional production at Baltimore Center Stage on Fri, March 27.

SUBMIT YOUR PLAY!

All playwrights must be currently enrolled in a Maryland public, private, or non-traditional educational institution, and must be in grades 2-12, or the equivalent. All plays should be approximately 10 minutes in length.

Submission deadline is February 7th, 2020.
Questions? Contact education@centerstage.org.
THANK YOU!

The following list includes gifts of $250 or more made to the Baltimore Center Stage Annual Fund October 1, 2018 through January 10, 2020. Although space limitations make it impossible for us to list everyone who helps fund our artistic, education, and community programs, we are enormously grateful to those who contribute to Baltimore Center Stage. We couldn’t do it without you!

INDIVIDUALS AND FOUNDATIONS

The Center Stage Society represents individual donors who, through their annual contributions of $1,500 or more, provide special opportunities for our artists and audiences. Society members are actively involved through special events, theater-related travel, and behind-the-scenes conversations with theater artists.

Baltimore Center Stage has launched two new committees, both helping the theater strengthen relationships and expand programming opportunities. The Family Engagement Committee is focused on creating opportunities for families with school-aged children, working to build the next generation of theatergoers. The Young Professional Engagement Committee is focused on connecting and inspiring young professionals in Baltimore to learn about, attend, and support the theater.

Young Yeila has dreams of becoming a hip-hop superstar, but there is a big problem - her terrible stage fright! After seeking advice from her mother and mentors, Yeila embarks on a journey to Cuba to discover her roots, her confidence, and her signature musical style. Dance along in this joyful, interactive show created by and starring Baltimore’s own Paige Hernandez.

This engagement of Paige Hernandez is funded through the Mid Atlantic Tours program of Mid Atlantic Arts Foundation with support from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Post-show discussions featuring Baltimore Center Stage artistic staff and visiting guests. Want to dive deeper into the ideas you see on stage in Richard & Jane & Dick & Sally? Stay (or come back!) after any of the following performances to join the conversation.

FEB 20: SEE PLAYS GROW

All of what we consider to be the theatrical “classics”—from Shakespeare to Hansbury—were once new plays. Are you interested in learning more about the new play process? Join playwright Noah Diaz and Artistic Director Stephanie Ybarra in conversation as they discuss the developmental trajectory of the play. What does it look like to become canonized in the present, and how do we help new playwrights join the ranks of “the greats”?

FEB 23: COMPLEXITIES OF CULTURE IN DEAF/HARD OF HEARING COMMUNITIES

In Richard & Jane & Dick & Sally, we glimpse how the hearing world silences and attempts to assimilate individuals who are Deaf, hard of hearing, and/or have experienced hearing loss. Stay after this evening’s performance to listen to and engage with Deaf artists Treshelle Edmond, Kala Granger, and Tiasha Bera as they discuss the pressures they face on a daily basis. Please note, this conversation will center Deaf artists.

Interpreters will be available.

FEB 27: THE PROCESSES OF GRIEVING

Death and grief are not subjects we frequently dwell on, and the experience of loss often triggers heavy emotions. In Richard & Jane & Dick & Sally, we get to know a family experiencing the aftermath of recent loss even as they prepare for another death in the family. Join End of Life Doula Valoria Walker in conversation to talk about how grief impacts individuals and relationships, discuss unexpected responsibilities that fall to families experiencing the loss of a loved one, and learn ways that we might move towards healthy and communal grieving practices.
When the Devil Pays His Respects

By Donnetta Lavinia Grays
Directed by Tamilla Woodard
Co-production with WP Theater
Apr 2–Apr 26, 2020

This brand-new fable of penance is filled with humor, heart, and music. When a town is running low on compassion and a man is stripped of companionship, just one kind stranger can tip the scales. Join in community as one passionate storyteller spins a supernatural tale of loneliness seduced by kindness and asks us “what do we owe each other?”

MEET NOAH DIAZ!
What’s your favorite way to communicate? (And why?)

You know that thing when you’re sharing a look with a close friend across a crowded room, and though you’re not saying anything, you both know exactly what the other means? Whatever that is.

Is there a book that brings you back to your childhood?

One of my earliest memories is staying up late to finish a book I’m reading, but after waking up the next morning and realizing I’d fallen asleep halfway through, my mother calls my school and tells them I’m sick so I can stay home and finish. That doesn’t answer your question, but it does tell you everything you need to know about my mother. Anyways, personal favorites from childhood include The Phantom Tollbooth, anything Roald Dahl, and Sideways Stories from Wayside School.

Do you have a memorable childhood game?

I grew up next door to a cemetery and I remember many of the neighborhood kids and I would play hide-and-seek there. My favorite hiding spot was an old mausoleum with a weak door you could pry open and squeeze through. (If you ever see me, remind me to tell you about the ghost who coughed on me.)

What would make you search the world as feverishly as Dick Jr.?

I don’t think I’m wise enough to answer this question yet. Maybe one day.

If you had a “theme” underscoring your life, how would it sound?

I think it would sound like the gentle, rhythmic tumble of a laundry dryer. Or like the quiet squeak of the overhead fan in my childhood bedroom. Or like freight trains I once remember hearing in the distance, chugging out smoke, lurching their way along crooked metal rails.

What’s in your travel bag?

Okay, a true thing you should know about me is that I have a very real obsession with going through people’s bags. I love this question. I travel frequently, so my day-to-day backpack doubles as my travel bag. Here’s what’s in there today: my MacBook with an old draft of a play of mine tucked into its case, my notebook and planner, a copy of Leigh Bardugo’s incredible novel Ninth House, my water bottle, a pencil case (that currently houses chapstick, pens, highlighters, three mini pads of Post-It’s, a roll of to-go Tums, and a gemstone that a meditation guide gifted me), a crumpled boarding pass from my last flight, foam earplugs, two phone chargers, a random binder clip, some spare change, and a half-empty pack of Extra gum.

This is not your English teacher’s Greek tragedy. Dionysus is totally over your drama, and he’s going to incite the women of the land to raise some hell in the greatest party in recorded history. Closing the season with a political exclamation point from the birthplace of Democracy, Bakkhai hits the Mainstage at the same moment our nation surges into its primary elections.

For more than fifty years, Baltimore Center Stage has engaged audiences with professional theater of the highest caliber.

Kramon & Graham is a proud supporter of this important artistic institution.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR GOOD WORK.
MEET THE ARTIST BEHIND OUR SHOW ART!

The artwork that represents each of our plays this season is more than just the typical show poster—each is a commissioned work of art by Baltimore-based, award-winning collage artist Mirlande Jean-Gilles. Drawing inspiration from the scripts, Jean-Gilles used her signature style to create these original pieces. Our collaboration is a celebration of how artists can inspire each other, creating new forms and expressions that speak to all of us. Learn more about Mirlande and our collaboration at centerstage.org/mirlande.

See The Originals
To see Mirlande’s original six, full-sized collages plus a seventh piece commissioned to respond both to our city and our season, stop by our brand new coffee bar, To Bean or Not to Bean™, open 8am-3pm in our newly transformed first floor. With an abundance of comfortable seating, free wifi, and cozy nooks, To Bean is the perfect place to come together with friends and colleagues or to carve out that quiet time around the hum and artistic energy of your professional theater. Who knows who you might bump into!

SERVICES

FOR OUR AUDIENCES

DINING Beginning two hours before each performance, Dooby’s will be serving dinner on the second floor in the Marilyn Meyerhoff Mezzanine. A selection of food and snacks from Atwater’s and the Peanut Shoppe is available at our first and fourth floor bars.

DRINKS Drinks from our bars are welcome in the theater; lids are required. Please no food in the theater. No outside food or drinks.

PHONES & RECORDING Please silence all phones and electronic devices before the show and after intermission. Audio and video recording are strictly forbidden. No photography of any kind is permitted during the show.

BATHROOMS Restrooms are located on first, second, and fourth floors. Baltimore Center Stage is in the process of changing our space to be supportive of gender diversity. All are welcome to use the restroom that best fits their identity. A single-occupancy restroom is available upon request. Please see a member of the Center Stage team for assistance.

BOX OFFICE The Marilyn Meyerhoff Box Office on the first floor can service all patron needs regarding purchasing tickets, will call, listening devices, braille and large print programs, and address any of your questions.

ON-STAGE SMOKING We use tobacco-free herbal imitations for any on-stage smoking and do everything possible to minimize the impact and amount of smoke that drifts into the audience. Let our Box Office or Audience Services personnel know if you’re smoke sensitive.

CHILDREN Children under six are not allowed in the theater for Mainstage productions.

LATE SEATING Patrons arriving after curtain will be seated at the house manager’s discretion. Late seating does not guarantee the seats on ticket.

ACCESSIBILITY

MOBILITY Wheelchair-accessible seating is available for every performance. There is a wheelchair available on the premises.

BLIND/LOW VISION The Audio Description/Touch Tour performances of Richard & Jane & Dick & Sally take place on Sun, Feb 23, at 2pm. We can also provide Audio Description services for any performance if given at least seven days notice. Touch Tours present a pre-show opportunity to feel props and set pieces on stage. Large print and braille programs are available upon request.

DEAF/HEARING LOSS Closed Captioning is available at no cost for any performance. Assistive listening devices are always available to be borrowed at no cost. ASL Interpreted performances will take place on Thu, Feb 13 at 7:30pm; Sun, Feb 23 at 2pm; and Fri, Feb 28 at 8pm. When buying online use promo code SIGN.

PARKING
If you are parking in the 601 N. Calvert St. Garage (diagonally across from the theater at Monument & Calvert) you can pay via credit card at the pay station in the garage lobby or at the in-lane pay station as you exit. We do not validate parking tickets.

FEEDBACK
We hope you have an enjoyable, stress-free experience! Your feedback and suggestions are always welcome: info@centerstage.org or access@centerstage.org.

ASL Interpretation for Richard & Jane & Dick & Sally is sponsored in part by The Bunting Family Foundation.
Honor Native Land

Responding to a call from our Indigenous colleagues, collaborators, and neighbors, Baltimore Center Stage is working toward building meaningful and accountable relationships with the land we occupy. As a first step on this path, you’ll see a land acknowledgement in each of our programs. Acknowledgment is itself a small gesture, and we look forward to continuing our efforts toward decolonization in a good way. If you’re interested in more information about the practice of land acknowledgement, feel free to visit the US Department of Arts and Culture’s “Honor Native Land” guide.

Baltimore Center Stage acknowledges that the land beneath us, this place, this community, owes its vitality to generations who have come before. Some were brought forcibly to this land, some came here in search of ownership or simply a better life, and some have lived and stewarded this land for countless generations. In a spirit of making erased histories visible, we acknowledge that we are standing on the ancestral and occupied lands of the Piscataway Nation. The Susquehannock, Lenape, and Lumbee peoples have also cared for this land. These peoples are not relics of the past, but they continue to steward this land today with care, vitality, and tradition. Their relations are numerous throughout Turtle Island, and they are continuing to grow. We pay respects to their elders past, present, and future. Please take a moment to consider the many legacies of violence, displacement, migration, and settlement that bring us together here today. And please join us in uncovering such truths at any and all public events.

Additionally in the spirit of reconciliation, you can honor the Indigenous peoples of this land by donating to Native American Lifelines, donating to or visiting the Baltimore American Indian Center & Heritage Museum, and supporting local Indigenous artists. These are only a few suggestions of the many ways we can move towards reconciliation.
